How Staff Came to Be Used as Construction Material for Exposition Building.

BONET NOW AT JAMESTOWN

NEW DEPARTURE FOR NEXT YEAR'S CELEBRATION.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 12.-Leo Bonet of New York, who first introduced staff as a construction material for exposition buildings and statuary in the United States, has arrived in Norfolk on business connected with the Jamestown exposition of 1907. Mr. Bonet, through his suggestion that staff be used in the construction of the Columbian exposi-tion at Chicago, may be credited with having saved about $20,000,000 to the builders of the several expositions that have been held in this country since The late Colonel Sellers of Missouri was a suggester of schemes with "millions in them." This man's sug-gestion really panned out the millions.

Solved the Problem.

Born in France, Mr. Bonet came to the United States twenty years ago and became an American citizen. In 1891, when the first great American exposi-tion since the Philadelphia Centennial was in embryo, Mr. Bonet went to Chicago. The problem of creating an architectural display with the maximum of magnificence at the minimum of ex-pense was under discussion. Wood Wood, glass and tin were chiefly employed at Philadelphia, resulting in structures more useful than beautiful. Mr. Bonet proposed to the Chicago exposition builders that staff be employed as the improved real estate is sold. Thus each state will be able to recover the cost principal constructive material for outside finish and ornamentation. At first his suggestion was not very seriously considered. The Frenchman was told that staff was not sufficiently durable; that, like the fabled wings of Icarus, it "couldn't stand sun heat and hard and other wear and tear of dispreys this potter. We dispreys this potter was a dispreyed the dispreys the dispression that dispression the dispression that dispression the dispression that dispression weather. To disprove this notion, Mr. Bonet made some staff figures and set them on top of the Rookery building in Chicago, exposed to a winter of rough weather. The next spring it was discovered that the staff had stood the storm. After due consideration, staff vas adopted, and the Columbian exposition thereby saved $4,500,000 in addito the achievement of the most beautiful exposition ever held up to that year. Since then every exposition has been built chiefly of wood and staff, saving in each instance millions of dollars. Had these world's fairs been built of steel and stone the cost would have been enormously greater and the time required in construction would have been doubled. For temporary buildings the material is capable of treatment to any color scheme desired. The bewildering beauty of expositions, in tint and or in the Filipino insurrection, whether hue, is due to a combination of plaster members of the organization or not, are of paris, hemp and dextrine-com- invited to be present. Mayor Conroy Will Send a Message to the Council on the Waterworks Question.

At the session of the city council this evening the recommendation of Mayor Conroy on the waterworks question, to fifty-year franchise in favor of the Ogden Waterworks company, declaring the one tecently passed to be null and void, changing that part of section 9 referring to the placing of meters and making same to the placing of meters and making same to read that meters shall be placed only upon the request of the consumer, will come up. It is somewhat doubtful if the council will take any further steps in this matter, although the point would be a good one in favor of the people. But the question arises, nevertheless, that if such a substitute franchise is offered and passed, what would become of the action that has been filed in the name of J. J. Brummitt against the city and the waterworks company? The franchise passed at the meeting of the city council July 39 is made a part of that complaint as "exhibit A," and in view of this fact it is altogether likely that if the action is to stand a new complaint would have to to stand a new complaint would have to be drawn and filed against the new or-cinance. The matter, of course, is only technical and at the most would post-pone the proceedings for a short time.

REGULAR MEETING

Weber Stake Sunday Schools Listen to Paper by Superintendent Thomas B. Evans.

The regular monthly union meeting of the Weber Stake Sunday schools was held in the Weber Stake academy at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was an unusually large attendance. The principal feature of the occasion was a paper prepared by Superintendent Thomas E. Evans on "The Duties of Sunday School Officers and Teachers." Mr. Evans held that a teacher should be one that possessed proper characteristics and one who could command the respect of those under his or her supervision. Another branch of the paper was on how to make a success of any undertaking. He said that to do this whether in Sunday school or other work one must adapt himself to the duties connected with the work and devolving upon him.

Professor J. E. Ballantyne delivered a talk on music before the kindergarten, primary and first intermediate departments. This was the first of a series of talks on this subject that will be delivered by Professor Ballantyne from time to time. The regular class work of the ensuing month was then taken up and disposed of. yesterday afternoon. There was an un-

The unfortunate girl took one step more and was swept off her feet by the current. Just before she sank she cried, "Oh, save me." The screams of the companions who realized that she of her companions, who realized that she was drowning, were heard by John C. Wilson, who rushed to the scene, arriving just at the time when she arose to the surface.

Wilson Plunged In.

Without a moment's hesitation or waiting to divest himself of his clothing. Wilson leaped into the water. In an instant he was in the clutches of the drowning girl. He was unable to break her hold and was forced under the water. Wilson's son reached the place about the time his father was sinking out of sight and rushed into the stream. Young Wilson assisted in pushing them toward the shore. When the girl's grasp was broken she sank for the last time and Wilson was pulled from the water by a number of men who had been attracted to the scene. By diving a number of men attempted to locate the body but it was fully an hour before William Belnap, jr., succeeded in bringing it to the surface.

Dead When Taken Out.

Dr. King of Hooper was on hand when the body was taken from the water but as life had long since been extinct nothing could be done to resuscitate the girl. Miss Garner was the daughter of Jedediah Garner, a prosperous farmer of that place. An inquest over the remains was held yesterday afternoon and a verdict of ac-cidental drowning returned.
